PREFACE.

MANY of our ministers must, with me, have felt a wish that there was a cheap and handy edition of the "Confession of Faith," for the use of their Bible classes and the adult portion of their congregations, in some such separate form as that in which the Shorter Catechism has been so often issued for the instruction of the children of the church. Every faithful servant of the Lord, knowing the shortcomings of the men of his own age, is apt to think his contemporaries worse than any generation that went before them; hence we might truly enough echo the complaint of Mr. Thomas Manton, in his separate epistle, and the lament of the xlv. divines who with him signed the address of the first published edition of the Confession, as to the decay of intelligence and piety in their day. It may be doubted whether the members and adherents of the Presbyterian Church in Canada know this authorized summary of the doctrines of the Bible, as familiarly as it deserves to be known; and it is not unreasonable to suppose that they would have a more intimate acquaintance with it to-day, very much to their advantage, if it had been within their reach in a simple form, like that in which it is presented in this edition. An objection has been taken to it that it is too bulky, and that it is expecting too much of the office-bearers of the Church to pledge them to the contents of this document. But when the bare propositions of the Confession, as they are now presented, are taken into account, our Subordinate Standard is seen to be not so extensive after all. It does not cover many pages. In former editions the proof-texts were given at length, and they occupied more space than the propositions which they were cited to support. There were advantages in this, as the divines, who issued the first edition, with the proofs extended, showed; but it may be questioned whether, after all, it is not as well that the student of the Confession should, in every case, find for himself, in his Bible, the text cited. Besides, in constructing the Confession and the other documents which they framed, the Westminster Assembly drew up the propositions first, and afterwards annexed the texts, moved thereto by the Parliament. Neither the xxxix. Articles, nor any of the Ancient Creeds had scripture proofs attached. It is true, that the second of the rules laid down by Parliament for the guidance of the Assembly stipulated, "What any man undertakes to prove as a necessary truth in religion he shall make good from the Holy Scriptures"; but at first the members of the Assembly regarded this rule as only applicable to the debates, not to the conclusions which they formulated. At all events, the Confession seems a much less formidable treatise to undertake to read, with the proofs omitted.

This doctrinal standard of the Presbyterian Church has been attacked on other grounds than its length; but any attack made upon it would have produced little impression, if the contents of the document were familiarly known. The doctrines of Grace stand out prominently in the Confession, but not more prominently than in the writings of the Apostle Paul; and the several parts are bound together by a chain of inexorable logic, so that when the objector is put to it, he finds it difficult to point to any part that would be omitted, without marring the design of the whole. But while it contains little that could be well left out, it lacks some of the matters on which it could, perhaps, be desirable to have an authoritative utterance. It is chiefly taken up with settling points on which professing Christians have differed. It affords us little help, for instance, in defining the relations between Science and Revelation. And yet all those previous questions, which men are raising in our day, were dealt with at an early period in the history of Christianity. Heathen naturalism, championed by Julian, Celsus, Porphyry, and Hypatia, was overcome by supernaturalism, in the hands of Christian champions; and it would have been well that the weapons they used so effectively had been handed down to us.

It was the Scottish General Assembly and Estates of Parliament that designated this treatise as the "Confession of Faith." The title by which it went in England was, "Articles of Religion, approved and passed by both Houses of Parliament, after advice had with an Assembly of Divines called together by them for that purpose." It is not a sectarian document, although it has been adopted by the Presbyterian Church, all over the world, as its Subordinate Standard. The divines composing the Westminster Assembly had received Episcopal ordination; and the members of Parliament, who sat with them, were in communion with the Church, as it had been up to that time constituted. During the sittings of the Assembly, the course of the national history was such as to set men's minds free from traditional views. Every institution was in that age thrown into the crucible of a severe logic; and very considerable differences arose among the members, on questions of Church Government and the Order of Public Worship. But there was substantial agreement among the Episcopalian, Presbyterian and Independent sympathizers in the Assembly, in the doctrinal part of their work, that on which their reputation chiefly rests; although there was scarcely a proposition that was not debated, and but few of them escaped dissent from at least one or two members, as the recently published Minutes of the Assembly show. Clarendon, an extreme Royalist and High-Churchman, on the one hand, and Milton, a Republican and Independent, on the other, affected to despise the members of the Assembly, as men entitled to little consideration. Prof. Masson, in his life of Milton, has been at pains to establish, however, that they were almost all men of quality and position. But apart from this point, which he has proved, their work has shown that they were not unworthy contemporaries of even the author of "Paradise Lost." It might be fairly enough maintained, indeed, that the "Confession of Faith," which one hears sometimes severely criticized, is the greatest product of the greatest age of the greatest country of which history informs us. To be impressed with the remarkable literary qualities—the clearness, the scientific precision, and the moderation of this treatise, all that we have to do is to read it in the light of the discussions which led up to the conclusions embraced in it, and compare its utterances with those of the Synod of Dort or of the Council of Trent. The gentlemen composing the Assembly were the elect of the English people—the Parliamentarians sitting in it being among the most eminent members of that Long Parliament which Macaulay has characterized as the greatest that has ever sat in Westminster Hall—and the divines being those who had an established reputation in the several counties of England for learning, piety and prudence. The debates in which they engaged show that they were men of high attainments, thoroughly familiar with the sources of Theology—the Scriptures, the Fathers and the Councils; and it may admit of question whether, even in our own time, with all its boasted acquirements, it would be easy for the Parliament of Great Britain, if it attempted it, to gather, in the same way, from the several counties of England, a body of men of equal spiritual insight, learning and sobriety of mind.

Prof. Mitchell has shown that it was apparently the Irish Articles of Faith, drawn up under the superintendence of Archbishop Usher, that formed the groundwork on which the Westminster Assembly based their plan, in drawing up the Confession. Six Scottish Commissioners assisted in framing the document, while the Assembly itself fully reflected the doctrinal views prevailing in England. Thus all the three kingdoms went hand-in-hand in producing it. Scotland afterwards adopted the Confession in its integrity laying aside its own time honoured symbols in order, to be in accord with the sister kingdoms. Chapters xxx., xxxi., xxiv., and the last paragraph of Chapter xx., never were endorsed by the English Parliament. But apart from this fact, the Confession contains the only uniform exposition of doctrine ever emitted by the authority of the three kingdoms. Mention has been made of the moderation which characterizes the conclusions of this Assembly, as compared with those of Synods held under purely ecclesiastical authority. This is in some measure attributable to the presence of the keen-witted laymen who took a conspicuous part in the discussions; but chiefly to the fact that, as the Assembly was summoned only to give advice to the Parliament of England, they knew that all their work had to run the gauntlet of a searching criticism, after it passed out of their hands, before it could receive any authority.

ROBERT CAMPBELL.

CONFESSION OF FAITH,

Agreed upon by the ASSEMBLY OF DIVINES at Westminster: Examined and approved, Anno 1647, by the GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND; and ratified by ACTS OF PARLIAMENT 1649 and 1690.

CHAP. I.—Of the Holy Scripture.

I. ALTHOUGH the light of nature, and the works of creation and providence, do so far manifest the goodness, wisdom, and power of God, as to leave men inexcusable;^a yet they are not sufficient to give that knowledge of God, and of his will, which is necessary unto salvation:^b therefore it pleased the Lord, at sundry times, and in divers manners, to reveal himself, and to declare that his will unto his Church;^c and afterwards, for the better preserving and propagating of the truth, and for the more sure establishment and comfort of the Church against the corruption of the flesh, and the malice of Satan and of the world, to commit the same wholly unto writing;^d which maketh the holy scripture to be most necessary;^e those former ways of God's revealing his will unto his people being now ceased.^f

IV. The authority of the holy scripture, for which it ought to be believed and obeyed, dependeth not upon the testimony of any man or church, but wholly upon God (who is truth itself), the author thereof; and therefore it is to be received, because it is the word of God.^l

V. We may be moved and induced by the testimony of the Church to an high and reverend esteem of the holy scripture,^k and the heavenliness of the matter, the efficacy of the doctrine, the majesty of the style, the consent of all the parts, the scope of the whole (which is to give all glory to God), the full discovery it makes of the only way of man's salvation, the many other incomparable excellencies, and the entire perfection thereof, are arguments whereby it doth abundantly evidence itself to be the word of God; yet, notwithstanding, our full persuasion and assurance of the infallible truth, and divine authority thereof, is from the inward work of the Holy Spirit, bearing witness by and with the word in our hearts.^l

VI. The whole counsel of God, concerning all things necessary for his own glory, man's salvation, faith, and life, is either expressly set down in scripture, or by good and necessary consequence may be deduced from scripture: unto which nothing at any time is to be added, whether by new revelations of the Spirit, or traditions of men.^m Nevertheless, we acknowledge the inward illumination of the Spirit of God to be necessary for the saving understanding of such things as are revealed in the word;ⁿ and that there are some circumstances concerning the worship of God, and Government of the Church, common to human actions and societies, which are to be ordered by the light of nature and Christian prudence, according to the general rules of the word, which are always to be observed.^o

VII. All things in scripture are not alike plain in themselves, nor alike clear unto all;^p yet those things which are necessary to be known, believed, and observed, for salvation, are so clearly propounded and opened in some place of scripture or other, that not only the learned, but the unlearned, in a due use of the ordinary means, may attain unto a sufficient understanding of them.^q

VIII. The Old Testament in Hebrew (which was the native language of the people of God of old), and the New Testament in Greek (which at the time of the writing of it was most generally known to the nations), being immediately inspired by God, and by his singular care and providence kept pure in all ages, are therefore authentic;^r so as in all controversies of religion, the Church is finally to appeal unto them.^s But because these original tongues are not known to all the people of God, who have right unto and interest in the scriptures, and are commanded, in the fear of God, to read and search them,^t therefore they are to be translated into the vulgar language of every nation unto which they come,^u that the word of God dwelling plentifully in all, they may worship him in an acceptable manner,^w and, through patience and comfort of the scriptures, may have hope.^x

IX. The infallible rule of interpretation of scripture is the scripture itself; and, therefore, when there is a question about the true and full sense of any scripture (which is not manifold, but one), it must be searched and known by other places that speak more clearly.^y

X. The supreme Judge, by which all controversies of religion are to be determined, and all decrees of councils, opinions of ancient writers, doctrines of men, and private spirits, are to be examined, and in whose sentence we are to rest, can be no other but the Holy Spirit speaking in the scripture.^z

IV. These angels and men, thus predestinated and foreordained, are particularly and unchangeably designed; and their number is so certain and definite, that it cannot be either increased or diminished.^h

V. Those of mankind that are predestinated unto life, God, before the foundation of the world was laid, according to his eternal and immutable purpose, and the secret counsel and good pleasure of his will, hath chosen in Christ unto everlasting glory,ⁱ out of his mere free grace and love, without any foresight of faith or good works, or perseverance in either of them, or any other thing in the creature, as conditions, or causes moving him thereunto;^k and all to the praise of his glorious grace.^l through faith unto salvation.^p Neither are any other redeemed by Christ, effectually called, justified, adopted, sanctified, and saved,^q but the elect only.^a

VII. The rest of mankind, God was pleased, according to the unsearchable counsel of his own will, whereby he extendeth or withholdeth mercy as he pleaseth, for the glory of his sovereign power over his creatures, to pass by, and to ordain them to dishonor and wrath for their sin, to the praise of his glorious justice.^r

VIII. The doctrine of this high mystery of predestination is to be handled with special prudence and care,^s that men attending the will of God revealed in his word, and yielding obedience thereunto, may, from the certainty of their effectual vocation, be assured of their eternal election.^t So shall this doctrine afford matter of praise, reverence, and admiration of God,^u and of humility, diligence, and abundant consolation, to all that sincerely obey the Gospel.^w

II. The first covenant made with man was a covenant of works,^b wherein life was promised to Adam, and in him to his posterity,^c upon condition of perfect and personal obedience.^d

III. Man by his fall having made himself incapable of life by that covenant, the Lord was pleased to make a second,^e commonly called the Covenant of Grace; whereby he freely offereth unto sinners life and salvation by Jesus Christ, requiring of them faith in him, that they may be saved;^f and promising to give unto all those that are ordained unto life his Holy Spirit, to make them willing and able to believe.^g

IV. This covenant of grace is frequently set forth in the scripture by the name of a Testament, in reference to the death of Jesus Christ the testator, and to the everlasting inheritance, with all things belonging to it therein, bequeathed.^h

V. This covenant was differently administered in the time of the law, and in the time of the gospel;ⁱ under the law it was administered by promises, prophecies, sacrifices, circumcision, the paschal lamb, and other types and ordinances delivered to the people of the Jews, all foreshadowing Christ to come,^k which were for that time sufficient and efficacious, through the operation of the Spirit, to instruct and build up

VII. Christ, in the work of mediation, acteth according to both natures; by each nature doing that which is proper to itself; ^o yet, by reason of the unity of the person, that which is proper to one nature is sometimes in scripture attributed to the person denominated by the other nature.^p

VIII. I. GOD hath endued the will of man with that natural liberty, that it is neither forced, nor by any absolute necessity of nature determined, to good or evil.^a

II. Man, in his state of innocency, had freedom and power to will and to do that which is good and well pleasing to God; ^b but yet, mutably, so that he might fall from it.^c

III. Man, by his fall into a state of sin, hath wholly lost all ability or will to any spiritual good accompanying salvation; ^d so as a natural man, being altogether averse from that good,^e and dead in sin,^f is not able, by his own strength, to convert himself or to prepare himself thereunto.^g

IV. When God converts a sinner, and translates him into the state of grace, he freeth him from his natural bondage under sin,^h and by his grace alone enables him freely to will and to do that which is spiritually good; ⁱ yet so as that, by reason of his remaining corruption, he doth not perfectly nor only will that which is good, but doth also will that which is evil.^k

III. Elect infants, dying in infancy, are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit,^m who worketh when, and where, and how he pleaseth.ⁿ So also are all other elect persons, who are incapable of being outwardly called by the ministry of the word.^o

IV. Others not elected, although they may be called by the ministry of the word,^p and may have some common operations of the Spirit,^q yet they never truly come unto Christ, and therefore cannot be saved; ^r much less can men not professing the Christian religion be saved in any other way whatsoever, be they ever so diligent to frame their lives according to the light of nature, and the law of that religion they do profess; ^s and to assert and maintain that they may, is very pernicious, and to be detested.^t

CHAP. XI.—Of Justification.

I. THOSE whom God effectually calleth he also freely justifieth; ^a not by infusing righteousness into them, but by pardoning their sins, and by accounting and accepting their persons as righteous: not for any thing wrought in them, or done by them, but for Christ's sake alone; not by imputing faith itself, the act of believing, or any other evangelical obedience, to them as their righteousness; but by imputing

the obedience and satisfaction of Christ unto them,^b they receiving and resting on him and his righteousness by faith: which faith they have not of themselves; it is the gift of God.^c

II. Faith, thus receiving and resting on Christ and his righteousness is the alone instrument of justification;^d yet is it not alone in the person justified, but is ever accompanied with all other saving graces, and is no dead faith, but worketh by love.^e

III. Christ, by his obedience and death, did fully discharge the debt of all those that are thus justified, and did make a proper, real, and full satisfaction to his Father's justice in their behalf.^f Yet, in as much as he was given by the Father for them,^g and his obedience and satisfaction accepted in their stead,^h and both freely, not for anything in them, their justification is only of free grace;ⁱ that both the exact justice and rich grace of God might be glorified in the justification of sinners.^k

II. This sanctification is throughout in the whole man,^g yet imperfect in this life; there abide still some remnants of corruption in every part;^h whence ariseth a continual and irreconcilable war; the flesh lusting against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh.ⁱ

I. THE grace of faith, whereby the elect are enabled to believe to the saving of their souls,^a is the work of the Spirit of Christ in their hearts,^b and is ordinarily wrought by the ministry of the word; ^c by which also, and by the administration of the sacraments, and prayer, it is increased and strengthened.^d

II. By this faith, a Christian believeth to be true whatsoever is revealed in the word, for the authority of God himself speaking therein; ^e and acteth differently upon that which each particular passage thereof containeth; yielding obedience to the commands,^f trembling at the threatenings,^g and embracing the promises of God for this life and that which is to come.^h But the principal acts of saving faith are, accepting, receiving, and resting upon Christ alone for justification, sanctification, and eternal life, by virtue of the covenant of grace.ⁱ

CHAP. XV.—Of Repentance unto Life.

I. REPENTANCE unto life is an evangelical grace,^a the doctrine whereof is to be preached by every minister of the gospel, as well as that of faith in Christ.^b

II. By it a sinner, out of the sight and sense, not only of the danger, but also of the filthiness and odiousness of his sins, as contrary to the holy nature and righteous law of God, and upon the apprehension of his mercy in Christ to such as are penitent, so grieves for and hates his sins, as to turn from them all unto God,^c purposing and endeavouring to walk with him in all the ways of his commandments.^d

III. Although repentance be not to be rested in, as any satisfaction for sin, or any cause of the pardon hereof,^e which is the act of God's free grace in Christ;^f yet is it of such necessity to all sinners, that none may expect pardon without it.^g

IV. As there is no sin so small but it deserves damnation;^h so there is no sin so great, that it can bring damnation upon those who truly repent.ⁱ

V. Men ought not to content themselves with general repentance, but it is every man's duty to endeavour to repent of his particular sins particularly

VI. As every man is bound to make private confession of his sins to God, praying for the pardon thereof;^l upon which, and the forsaking of them, shall find mercy;^m so he that scandalizeth his brother or the church of Christ, ought to be willing, by private or public confession and sorrow for his sin, declare his repentance to those that are offended who are thereupon to be reconciled to him, and in love to receive him.^o

I. GOOD works are only such as God hath commanded in his holy word,^a and not such without the warrant thereof, are devised by men of blind zeal, or upon any pretence of good intention

II. These good works, done in obedience to God's commandments, are the fruits and evidences of a true and lively faith;^c and by them believers manifest

III. Their ability to do good works is not at all of themselves, but wholly from the Spirit of Christ.^m And that they may be enabled thereunto, besides the graces they have already received, there is required an actual influence of the same Holy Spirit to work in them to will and to do of his good pleasure;ⁿ yet are they not hereupon to grow negligent, as if they were not bound to perform any duty unless upon a special motion of the Spirit; but they ought to be diligent in stirring up the grace of God that is in them.^o

IV. They who in their obedience attain to the greatest height which is possible in this life, are so far from being able to supererogate, and to do more than God requires, as that they fall short of much which in duty they are bound to do.^p

V. We cannot, by our best works, merit pardon of sin, or eternal life, at the hand of God, by reason of the great disproportion that is between them and the glory to come, and the infinite distance that is between

VI. Yet notwithstanding, the persons of believers being accepted through Christ, their good works also are accepted in him; ^v not as though they were in this life wholly unblamable and unreprouable in God's sight; ^w but that he, looking upon them in his Son, is pleased to accept and reward that which is sincere, although accompanied with many weaknesses and imperfections. ^x

CHAP. XVII.—Of the Perseverance of the Saints.

I. THEY whom God hath accepted in his Beloved, effectually called and sanctified by his Spirit, can neither totally nor finally fall away from the state of grace; but shall certainly persevere therein to the end, and be eternally saved.^a

II. This perseverance of the saints depends not upon their own free will, but upon the immutability of the decree of election, flowing from the free and unchangeable love of God the Father;^b upon the efficacy of the merit and intercession of Jesus Christ;^c the abiding of the Spirit, and of the seed of God within them;^d and the nature of the covenant of grace;^e from all which ariseth also the certainty and infallibility thereof.^f

III. Nevertheless they may, through the temptations of Satan and of the world, the prevalence of corruption remaining in them, and the neglect of the means of their preservation, fall into grievous sins;^g

CHAP. XVIII.—Of Assurance of Grace and Salvation.

I. ALTHOUGH hypocrites, and other unregenerate men, may vainly deceive themselves with false hopes and carnal presumptions of being in the favour of God and estate of salvation ;^a which hope of theirs shall perish ;^b yet such as truly believe in the Lord Jesus, and love him in sincerity, endeavouring to walk in all good conscience before him, may in this life be certainly assured that they are in the state of grace,^c and may rejoice in the hope of the glory of God ; which hope shall never make them ashamed,^d

II. This certainty is not a bare conjectural and probable persuasion, grounded upon a fallible hope ;^e but an infallible assurance of faith, founded upon the divine truth of the promises of salvation,^f the inward evidence of those graces unto which these promises are made,^g the testimony of the Spirit of adoption witnessing with our spirits that we are the children of God; ^h which Spirit is the earnest of our inheritance, whereby we are sealed to the day of redemption.ⁱ

III. This infallible assurance doth not so belong to the essence of faith, but that a true believer may wait long, and conflict with many difficulties, before he be partaker of it; ^k yet, being enabled by the Spirit to know the things which are freely given him of God, he may, without extraordinary revelation, in the right use of ordinary means, attain thereunto.^l And therefore it is the duty of every one to give all diligence to make his calling and election sure; ^m that thereby his heart may be enlarged in peace and joy in the Holy Ghost, in love and thankfulness to God, and in strength and cheerfulness in the duties of obedience, ⁿ the proper fruits of this assurance: so far is it from inclining men to looseness.^o

IV. True believers may have the assurance of their salvation divers ways shaken, diminished, and intermitted; as, by negligence in preserving of it; by falling into some special sin, which woundeth the conscience, and grieveth the Spirit; by some sudden or vehement temptation; by God's withdrawing the light of his countenance, and suffering even such as fear him

IV. To them also, as a body politic, he gave sundry judicial laws, which expired together with the state of that people, not obliging any other now further than the general equity thereof may require.^g

V. The moral law doth for ever bind all, as well justified persons as others, to the obedience thereof;^h and that not only in regard of the matter contained in it, but also in respect of the authority of God, the Creator, who gave it.ⁱ Neither doth Christ in the gospel any way dissolve, but much strengthen this obligation.^k

CHAP. XX.—Of Christian Liberty, and Liberty of Conscience.

I. THE liberty which Christ hath purchased for believers under the gospel, consists in their freedom from the guilt of sin, the condemning wrath of God, the curse of the moral law; ^a and in their being delivered from this present evil world, bondage to Satan, and dominion of sin, ^b from the evil of afflictions, the sting of death, the victory of the grave, and everlasting damnation; ^c as also in their free access to God, ^d and their yielding obedience unto him, not out of slavish fear, but a child-like love, and willing mind. ^e All which were common also to believers under the law; ^f but under the new testament, the liberty of Christians is further enlarged in their freedom from the yoke of the ceremonial law, to which the Jewish Church was subjected, ^g and in greater boldness of access to the throne of grace, ^h and in fuller communications of the free Spirit of God, than believers under the law did ordinarily partake of. ¹

II. God alone is lord of the conscience,^k and hath left it free from the doctrines and commandments of men which are in any thing contrary to his word, or beside it, in matters of faith or worship.¹ So that to believe such doctrines, or to obey such commandments out of conscience, is to betray true liberty of conscience; ^m and the requiring of an implicit faith, and an absolute and blind obedience, is to destroy liberty of conscience, and reason also.ⁿ

III. They who, upon pretence of Christian liberty, do practise any sin, or cherish any lust, do thereby destroy the end of Christian liberty; which is, that, being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, we might serve the Lord without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.^o

IV. And because the powers which God hath ordained, and the liberty which Christ hath purchased, are not intended by God to destroy, but mutually to uphold and preserve one another; they who, upon pretence of Christian liberty, shall oppose any lawful power, or the lawful exercise of it, whether it be civil or ecclesiastical, resist the ordinance of God.^p And for their publishing of such opinions, or maintaining of such practices, as are contrary to the light of nature, or

VI. Neither prayer, nor any other part of religious worship, is, now under the gospel, either tied unto, or made more acceptable by, any place in which it is performed, or towards which it is directed;^c but God is to be worshipped every where^d in spirit and in truth;^e as in private families^f daily,^g and in secret each one by himself;^h so more solemnly in the public assemblies, which are not carelessly or wilfully to be neglected or forsaken, when God, by his word or providence, calleth thereunto.ⁱ

VIII. This sabbath is then kept holy unto the Lord, when men, after a due preparing of their hearts, and ordering of their common affairs before-hand, do not only observe an holy rest all the day from their own works, words, and thoughts about their worldly employments and recreations; ^o but also are taken up the whole time in the public and private exercises of his worship, and in the duties of necessity and mercy? ^p

CHAP. XXII.—Of lawful Oaths and Vows.

I. A LAWFUL oath is a part of religious worship, ^a wherein, upon just occasion, the person swearing solemnly calleth God to witness what he asserteth or promiseth; and to judge him according to the truth or falsehood of what he sweareth. ^b

II. The name of God only is that by which men ought to swear, and therein it is to be used with all holy fear and reverence; ^c therefore to swear vainly or rashly by that glorious and dreadful name, or to swear at all by any other thing, is sinful, and to be abhorred. ^d

Yet as, in matters of weight and moment, an oath is warranted by the word of God under the New Testament, as well as under the Old;^e so a lawful oath, being imposed by lawful authority, in such matters, ought to be taken.^f

III. Whosoever taketh an oath, ought duly to consider the weightiness of so solemn an act, and therein to avouch nothing but what he is fully persuaded is the truth.^g Neither may any man bind himself by oath to any thing but what is good and just, and what he believeth so to be, and what he is able and resolved to perform.^h Yet it is a sin to refuse an oath touching any thing that is good and just, being imposed by lawful authority.¹

IV. An oath is to be taken in the plain and common sense of the words, without equivocation or mental reservation.^k It cannot oblige to sin; but in anything not sinful, being taken, it binds to performance, although to a man's own hurt;^l nor is it to be violated, although made to heretics or infidels.^m

IV. Marriage ought not to be within the degrees of consanguinity or affinity forbidden in the word;^h nor can such incestuous marriages ever be made lawful by any law of man, or consent of parties, so as those persons may live together as man and wife.ⁱ The man may not marry any of his wife's kindred nearer in blood than he may of his own, nor the woman of her husband's kindred nearer in blood than of her own.^k

V. Adultery or fornication committed after a contract, being detected before marriage, giveth just occasion to the innocent party to dissolve that contract.^l In the case of adultery after marriage, it is lawful for the innocent party to sue out a divorce,^m and, after the divorce, to marry another, as if the offending party were dead.ⁿ

VI. Although the corruption of man be such as is apt to study arguments, unduly to put asunder those whom God hath joined together in marriage; yet nothing but adultery, or such wilful desertion as can no way be remedied by the church or civil magistrate, is cause sufficient of dissolving the bond of marriage:^o wherein a public and orderly course of proceeding is to be observed, and the persons concerned in it not left to their own wills and discretion in their own case.^p

I. THE catholic or universal church, which is invisible, consists of the whole number of the elect that have been, are, or shall be gathered into one, under Christ the head thereof; and is the spouse, the body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all.^a

II. The visible church, which is also catholic or universal under the gospel (not confined to one nation, as before under the law), consists of all those throughout the world that profess the true religion,^b together with their children;^c and is the kingdom of the Lord

III. Unto this catholic visible church Christ hath given the ministry, oracles, and ordinances of God, for the gathering and perfecting of the saints in this life, to the end of the world; and doth by his own presence and Spirit according to his promise, make them effectual thereunto.^g

IV. This catholic church hath been sometimes more, sometimes less visible.^h And particular churches, which are members thereof, are more or less pure, according as the doctrine of the gospel is taught and embraced, ordinances administered, and public worship performed more or less purely in them.ⁱ

V. The purest churches under heaven are subject both to mixture and error;^k and some have so degenerated as to become no churches of Christ, but synagogues of Satan.^l Nevertheless, there shall be always a church on earth to worship God according to his will.^m

VI. There is no other head of the church but the Lord Jesus Christ:ⁿ nor can the Pope of Rome in any sense be head thereof; but is that antichrist, that man of sin, and son of perdition, that exalteth himself in the church against Christ, and all that is called God.^o

V. The sacraments of the Old Testament, in regard of the spiritual things thereby signified and exhibited, were, for substance, the same with those of the New.^l

CHAP. XXVIII.—Of Baptism.

I. BAPTISM is a sacrament of the New Testament, ordained by Jesus Christ,^a not only for the solemn admission of the party baptized into the visible church,^b but also to be unto him a sign and seal of the covenant of grace,^c of his ingrafting into Christ,^d of regeneration,^e of remission of sins,^f and of his giving up unto God through Jesus Christ, to walk in newness of life:^g which sacrament is by Christ's own appointment, to be continued in his church until the end of the world.^h

II. The outward element to be used in this sacrament is water, wherewith the party is to be baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, by a minister of the gospel, lawfully called thereunto.ⁱ

III. Dipping of the person into the water is not necessary; but baptism is rightly administered by pouring or sprinkling water upon the person.^k

IV. Not only those that do actually profess faith in and obedience unto Christ,^l but also the infants of one or both believing parents are to be baptized.^m

V. Although it be a great sin to contemn or neglect this ordinance,ⁿ yet grace and salvation are not so inseparably annexed unto it, as that no person can be regenerated or saved without it,^o or that all that are baptized are undoubtedly regenerated.^p

VI. The efficacy of baptism is not tied to that moment of time wherein it is administered;^q yet notwithstanding, by the right use of this ordinance, the grace promised is not only offered, but really exhibited and conferred by the Holy Ghost, to such (whether of age or infants) as that grace belongeth unto, according to the counsel of God's own will in his appointed time.^r

CHAP. XXIX.—Of the Lord's Supper.

I. OUR Lord Jesus, in the night wherein he was betrayed, instituted the sacrament of his body and blood, called the Lord's Supper, to be observed in his church unto the end of the world, for the perpetual remembrance of the sacrifice of himself in his death, the sealing all benefits thereof unto true believers, their spiritual nourishment and growth in him, their further engagement in and to all duties which they owe unto him, and to be a bond and pledge of their communion with him, and with each other, as members of his mystical body.^a

II. In this sacrament Christ is not offered up to his Father, nor any real sacrifice made at all for remission of sins of the quick or dead; ^b but only a commemoration of that one offering up of himself, by himself, upon the cross, once for all, and a spiritual oblation of all possible praise unto God for the same; ^c so that the Popish sacrifice of the mass, as they call it, is most abominably injurious to Christ's one only sacrifice, the alone propitiation for all the sins of the elect.^d

III. The Lord Jesus hath, in this ordinance, appointed his ministers to declare his word of institution to the people, to pray, and bless the elements of bread and wine, and thereby to set them apart from a common to a holy use; and to take and break the bread, to take the cup, and (they communicating also themselves) to give both to the communicants;^e but to none who are not then present in the congregation.^f

IV. Private masses, or receiving this sacrament by a priest, or any other, alone;^g as likewise the denial of the cup to the people;^h worshipping the elements, the lifting them up, or carrying them about for adoration, and the reserving them for any pretended religious use; are all contrary to the nature of this sacrament, and to the institution of Christ.ⁱ

V. The outward elements in this sacrament, duly set apart to the uses ordained by Christ, have such relation to him crucified, as that truly, yet sacramentally only, they are sometimes called by the name of the things they represent, to wit, the body and blood of Christ;^k albeit, in substance and nature they still remain truly and only bread and wine, as they were before.^l

VI. That doctrine which maintains a change of the substance of bread and wine into the substance of Christ's body and blood (commonly called Transubstantiation) by consecration of a priest, or by any other way, is repugnant not to scripture alone, but even to common sense and reason; overthroweth the nature of the sacrament; and hath been and is the cause of manifold superstitions, yea, of gross idolatries.^m

III. ^e Matt. xxvi. 26, 27 [See in letter c.], 28; Mark xiv. 22, 23, 24; Luke xxii. 19, 20; 1 Cor. xi. 23-26. [See all in letter a.] ^f Acts xx. 7; 1 Cor. xi. 20.

VII. Worthy receivers, outwardly partaking of the visible elements in this sacrament,ⁿ do then also inwardly by faith, really and indeed, yet not carnally and corporally, but spiritually, receive and feed upon Christ crucified, and all benefits of his death; the body and blood of Christ being then not corporally or carnally in, with, or under the bread and wine; yet as really, but spiritually, present to the faith or believers in that ordinance, as the elements themselves are to their outward senses.^o

VIII. Although ignorant and wicked men receive the outward elements in this sacrament, yet they receive not the thing signified thereby; but by their unworthy coming thereunto are guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, to their own damnation. Wherefore all ignorant and ungodly persons, as they are unfit to enjoy communion with him, so are they unworthy of the Lord's table, and cannot, without great sin against Christ, while they remain such, partake of these holy mysteries,^p or be admitted thereunto.^q heaven are committed, by virtue whereof they have power respectively to retain and remit sins, to shut that kingdom against the impenitent, both by the word and censures; and to open it unto penitent sinners, by the ministry of the gospel, and by absolution from censures, as occasion shall require.^b

III. Church censures are necessary for the reclaiming and gaining of offending brethren; for deterring of others from the like offences; for purging out of that leaven which might infect the whole lump; for vindicating the honour of Christ, and the holy profession of the gospel; and for preventing the wrath of God, which might justly fall upon the church, if they should suffer his covenant, and the seals thereof, to be profaned by notorious and obstinate offenders.^c

IV. For the better attaining of these ends, the officers of the church are to proceed by admonition, suspension from the sacrament of the Lord's Supper for a season, and by excommunication from the church, according to the nature of the crime, and demerit of the person.^d

III. It belongeth to synods and councils ministerially to determine controversies of faith, and cases of conscience ; to set down rules and directions for the better ordering of the public worship of God, and government of his church ; to receive complaints in cases of mal-administration, and authoritatively to determine the same : which decrees and determinations, if consonant to the word of God, are to be received with reverence and submission, not only for their agreement with the word, but also for the power whereby they are made, as being an ordinance of God, appointed thereunto in his word.^d

IV. All synods or councils since the apostles' times, whether general or particular, may err, and many have erred ; therefore they are not to be made the rule of faith or practice, but to be used as a help in both.^e

I. THE bodies of men after death return to dust, and see corruption;^a but their souls (which neither die nor sleep), having an immortal subsistence, immediately return to God who gave them.^b The souls of the righteous, being then made perfect in holiness, are received into the highest heavens, where they behold the face of God in light and glory, waiting for the full redemption of their bodies;^c and the souls of the wicked are cast into hell, where they remain in torments and utter darkness, reserved to the judgment of the great day.^d Besides these two places for souls separated from their bodies, the scripture acknowledgeth none.

II. At the last day, such as are found alive shall not die, but be changed:^e and all the dead shall be raised with the self-same bodies, and none other, although with different qualities, which shall be united again to their souls for ever.^f

II. The end of God's appointing this day is for the manifestation of the glory of his mercy in the eternal salvation of the elect, and of his justice in the damnation of the reprobate, who are wicked and disobedient.
